

Good week for

Cleaning out your desk

A 1652 American coin, recently found in a sweet tin in the study of the 4th Viscount Allendale, will go under the hammer with Morton & Eden next month at £150,000–£200,000

Jersey squirrel spotting

Red squirrels are thriving in Jersey's grey-free woodlands, despite their general UK decline, but one in four children on the island have never seen one, so Visit Jersey has launched a count

Sausages and bacon

Up to 800 butchers will be allowed to travel to the UK on temporary visas to help ease the backlog of pigs on farms, the Government has announced

Remembering the fallen

A 328ft-long replica First World War trench has been built in Kent, by historian Andy Robertshaw, who worked on the films War Horse and 1917, to educate children

Puppy love

An 11-week-old American bulldog puppy has been reunited with his owners in Leicester and christened Lucky two weeks after he was stolen

Bad week for

Nigel and Neville

Last year, more babies were named Lucifer than Nigel, Neville or Graham, finds the latest Office for National Statistics data

Expanding Wimbledon

After controversy over the AELTC's plans for Wimbledon Park (September 29), Merton and Wandsworth councils have counted objections vs statements of support: 659 to 14 and 486 to 13 respectively

British farmers

The New Zealand trade deal may reduce the cost of Sauvignon Blanc, but the influx of imported meat and dairy could damage the interests of British farmers, say the NFU and the CLA

